

Abstract

A method of preventing or suppressing an immune response or immune mediated response comprising administering an effective amount of an histone deacetylase inhibitor compound alone or in combination with a second pharmacologically active agent.